OPINION - A BETTER PATH: WHY “SLASH AND BURN” SOCIAL POLICY FAILS RURAL AMERICA

by Christine E. Hamp
National Grange President

Across America, we are seeing an alarming trend in policymaking - what I call the “slash and burn” approach. In an effort to cut costs, some leaders are gutting programs that support hardworking families, rural infrastructure, education, and agriculture. In the name of “efficiency,” communities are being stripped of essential resources and funding, leaving small towns and rural areas to fend for themselves.

Let me be clear: fiscal responsibility is important. Wasteful spending must be curbed, and government programs should be accountable to taxpayers. But reckless, across-the-board cuts without consideration for real-life consequences are not leadership - they are short-sighted, reactionary decisions that harm the very people they claim to serve and weaken the foundation of rural America.

The Cost of Cutting Without a Plan

Too often, rural America bears the brunt of these cuts. Programs that provide high-speed internet, rural healthcare access, agriculture research, and small business support are slashed with little thought to the long-term economic impact.

Consider proposed cuts to broadband expansion: Gutting funding for rural internet access doesn't just save money - it puts a stranglehold on rural America. It means students will struggle to access education and complete assignments, farmers will be cut off from critical tools that help increase yield and market their goods, and local businesses will be unable to compete in a modern digital marketplace. That's not “fiscal responsibility” - that's setting rural America back by decades, pushing young families and businesses out of rural communities.

The same goes for cuts to agricultural programs. Farming isn't just a business - it's a way of life that feeds this nation. Slashing conservation programs, research funding, or cooperative extension services doesn't “trim the fat” - it cripples family farms, undermining the very foundation of American food security.

Investing Smarter, Not Cutting Deeper

Instead of knee-jerk cuts, we need smart, strategic investment that ensures efficiency without abandoning communities. The National Grange has always believed in local solutions, self-reliance, and responsible governance - but we also know that government has a role in laying the foundation for rural success by building up these communities before it's too late.

Rather than gutting rural healthcare, let's reform existing policies to reduce administrative or overhead waste while expanding access to care. Rather than slashing funding for schools, let's invest in vocational training, apprenticeships, and modernized rural education. Rather than cutting agriculture programs, let's ensure funding prioritizes family farms and rural resilience.

“Slash and burn” cuts weaken rural America, but smart investments make it stronger. Creating the right policies and reforms won't just prevent economic decline; they will create opportunity, growth, and the potential for prosperity, thus allowing rural communities to rely less on government funding in the long term.

The Grange Way: Strong Communities, Strong Nation

For almost 160 years, the Grange has stood for rural prosperity, community-driven solutions, and balanced leadership. We reject the idea that progress comes from tearing down - we believe in building up and giving every citizen the opportunity for success.

Slashing budgets without a plan is easy. Leading with vision, investing in people, and creating sustainable solutions is harder - but it's the right path forward.

I urge our leaders to abandon the “slash and burn” mindset and instead commit to a measured, thoughtful approach that strengthens rural America rather than leaving it behind.

Equally, I urge those living in rural communities to demand policies that build up, not degrade, our communities. Demand support for policies and initiatives strengthening rural infrastructure, education, and agriculture.

Because when rural communities thrive, our entire nation is stronger.

REACH RURAL SURGICAL SENIORS

Since 2023, the National Grange has been a proud advocate for the Reaching Rural Surgical Seniors (RRSS) program, a vital initiative designed to help individuals, regardless of age, better prepare for surgery by knowing what questions to ask, and make informed decisions about their future care.

While the grant supporting this program is set to conclude in the coming months, the valuable resources at seniorsurgeryguides.com will remain available. We strongly encourage Granges nationwide to continue championing and promoting this important program in their communities.

Grange Month events present an excellent opportunity to raise awareness about the RRSS program. The National Grange has a limited supply of additional 8-page full-color “Planning for My Future” guides available. If you’d like to receive up to 50 copies for distribution at your event, please email rrss@grange.org with your name, Grange, mailing address, and event date to ensure timely delivery.

Granges that have presented or promoted the RRSS program must submit their final reports by the end of May. As a token of appreciation for your efforts, Community and Pomona Granges can receive $100 for hosting a presentation, while State Granges can earn $500. Be sure to download the final report form and submit it on time to secure these funds.

Together, we can continue making a meaningful impact by ensuring that individuals in rural communities have access to crucial surgical preparedness resources. Let’s keep the momentum going!

NEW YORK GRANGES TO PRESENT RURAL MENTAL HEALTH PROGRAM

submitted by Carol S. Bailey
Wayne County Pomona Grange #34 (NY)

Mental health is a challenge in rural America. Rural Minds, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, serves as a voice for mental health in rural America and provides information and resources. With a vision for a rural America where there is no stigma, silence and suffering with mental illness, this is a national organization.

The Granges of Wayne County are hosting a presentation by Rural Minds founder, Jeff Winton, as a community service to this rural county and surrounding ones. The program will be at 1p.m. on Saturday March 29 at the Newark Grange Hall, 101 Woodlane in Newark.

Rural Minds will provide resources, information, and suggestions to assist in being part of the solution. In rural areas there are higher rates of depression and suicide than in urban areas. Suicide rates are 64% - 68% higher among the rural populace than urban dwellers. Farmers are twice as likely as people in other occupations to die by suicide. Accessing care may be harder to find.

Jeff Winton, founder and chair of Rural Minds, is a dairy farmer on a multigenerational farm in Chautauqua County. When his nephew died by suicide the family decided to speak about it. Hearing about other farm families' struggles with mental health, Jeff was convinced to devote his energy to connecting rural Americans with mental health information and resources.

Other mental health professionals will be on hand as well to provide help and information. There will be beverages and snacks. Questions call 315-946-4379 or email barnlady38@yahoo.com. Come to Newark Grange Hall on March 29 at 1p.m. to get information that may save a life.

Jeff Winton, CEO and Founder of Rural Minds, Inc., will speak at the Wayne County Grange's meeting on March 29.

12 Tips If You're Feeling Isolated And Lonely

If you are feeling lonely, here are some steps that can help you build social connection:

- Understand the power of social connection and the consequences of social disconnection by learning how the vital components (structure, function, and quality) can impact your relationships, health, and well-being.
 - Invest time in nurturing your relationships through consistent, frequent, and high-quality engagement with others. Take time each day to reach out to a friend or family member.
 - Minimize distraction during conversation to increase the quality of the time you spend with others. For instance, don't check your phone during meals with friends, important conversations, and family time.
 - Seek out opportunities to serve and support others, either by helping your family, co-workers, friends, or strangers in your community or by participating in community service.
 - Be responsive, supportive, and practice gratitude. As we practice these behaviors, others are more likely to reciprocate, strengthening our social bonds, improving relationship satisfaction, and building social capital.
 - Actively engage with people of different backgrounds and experiences to expand your understanding of and relationships with others, given the benefits associated with diverse connection
 - Participate in social and community groups such as fitness, religious, hobby, professional, and community service organizations to foster a sense of belonging, meaning, and purpose.
 - Reduce practices that lead to feelings of disconnection from others. These include harmful and excessive social media use, time spent in unhealthy relationships, and disproportionate time in front of screens instead of people.
- Seek help during times of struggle with loneliness or isolation by reaching out to a family member, friend, counselor, health care provider, or the 988 crisis line.
 - Be open with your health care provider about significant social changes in your life, as this may help them understand potential health impacts and guide them to provide recommendations to mitigate health risks.
 - Make time for civic engagement. This could include being a positive and constructive participant in political discourse and gatherings (e.g., town halls, school board meetings, local government hearings).
 - Reflect the core values of connection in how you approach others in conversation and through the actions you take. Key questions to ask yourself when considering your interactions with others include: How might kindness change this situation? What would it look like to treat others with respect? How can I be of service? How can I reflect my concern for and commitment to other?

If mental health challenges become overwhelming, it may be necessary to seek professional help. Reach out to a mental health professional who can provide appropriate support or intervention, or call or text 988.

MANSON GRANGE HALL CELEBRATES RENOVATION MILESTONE

submitted by Debbie Conwell
Manson Grange #796 (WA)

The historic Manson Grange Hall, a cornerstone of the community since 1945, is proudly unveiling the first phase of a much-anticipated renovation project. Thanks to the tireless efforts of local volunteers, generous contributions from community members, and support from local businesses, the Grange Hall is ready to continue serving as a vibrant gathering space for generations to come.

The renovation, beginning in 2025, focuses on preserving the hall's historic charm while addressing critical updates to ensure safety, accessibility, and functionality. Key improvements include:

- Modernized Facilities: Upgrades to the kitchen, restrooms, and event spaces to better serve modern needs.
- Enhanced Accessibility: Installation of ramps, railings, and ADA-compliant features to welcome all community members.

Manson Grange in Manson, Washington, has started its 7-step renovation project, so that it can continue supporting and serving the community for generations to come.

The first phase of the renovation includes repairs and updates to the basement of the Grange Hall, including updating a 75-year old sewer line and modernizing and making the restrooms accessible.

- Energy Efficiency: New energy-efficient lighting and HVAC systems to reduce environmental impact.

- Internal refreshing: painting, resurfacing the wood floor and installing new lighting.

“The Manson Grange Hall has always been more than just a building; it’s a symbol of our shared history and community spirit,” said Terri Carleton, Volunteer of the Manson Grange Renovation Committee. “This renovation ensures that we can continue hosting events, meetings, and celebrations in a space that reflects the pride we have in our town.”

An Open House is scheduled for May. The event will include tours of the renovated space, live music, refreshments, and opportunities to learn more about the Grange’s ongoing programs. All are welcome to attend and experience the revitalized hall firsthand.

The Manson Grange Hall renovation was made possible through the collaborative efforts of

CELEBRATE NATIONAL AG DAY WITH YOUR GRANGE

National Ag Day, celebrated on March 18, is a prime opportunity for Granges across the country to highlight the importance of agriculture, support local farmers, and educate their communities about the industry that sustains us all. This day recognizes the vital role of agriculture in providing food, fiber, and renewable resources. Granges, with their long history of agricultural advocacy and community service, are uniquely positioned to make a significant impact during these celebrations.

Beyond education and advocacy, National Ag Day is also an ideal time for Granges to align their efforts with National Grange's Project Sustenance, an initiative dedicated to fighting food insecurity and strengthening local communities to make a lasting and sustainable impact.

1. Host Educational Events

Granges can organize farm tours, guest speaker panels, or agricultural fairs to educate people about modern farming, sustainability, and food security. Partnering with local schools to offer hands-on agricultural experiences—such as planting gardens or learning about food production—can inspire the next generation.

Incorporate discussions on food accessibility, sustainable farming, and the importance of supporting local food systems to ensure that everyone has access to fresh, nutritious food.

GRANGE HEIRLOOM FOR MARCH

Use the Grange Heirloom Program to teach your members and the community about some of the key cornerstones of the Grange. Materials are available at <http://www.nationalgrange.org/heirloom-program>.

Year D of the Heirloom Program begins in March 2025, but you're welcome to use any materials or resources available to help teach these valuable lessons.

2. Organize a Community Meal Featuring Local Foods

Hosting a farm-to-table meal using locally sourced ingredients is a fantastic way to bring the community together. This event can serve as a fundraiser for local food banks or agricultural scholarships while showcasing the importance of supporting local farmers.

Consider making this a pay-what-you-can event to ensure everyone has access, or consider donating the "leftovers" to a local shelter.

3. Engage in Advocacy and Public Awareness Campaigns

National Ag Day provides a platform for Granges to advocate for agricultural issues such as food security, farm sustainability, and rural development. Hosting letter-writing campaigns to legislators, organizing social media awareness drives using #AgDay, and publishing op-eds in local newspapers can amplify these efforts.

4. Recognize Local Farmers and Ag Leaders

Granges can honor local farmers, educators, and youth involved in agriculture by presenting awards or certificates of appreciation. Recognizing their contributions not only shows appreciation but also strengthens community bonds.

By participating in National Ag Day, Granges can do more than just celebrate agriculture, they can take meaningful action. Connecting these efforts to Project Sustenance ensures that the impact extends beyond one day, fostering stronger, more resilient food systems in local communities.
